Letters and Tomatoes

TABLE FULL OF CONTENTS

I have watched your shows as a child but when I got older I got responsible and signed up for subscriptions to Money, Travel & Leisure, as well as Cosmopolitan (every woman can use a few tips "wink") but one day while at work I noticed the sun shining onto a table. I looked and there was a bunch of magazines someone left to share, Time, MAD and Forbes. Being that I was at work and already feeling sad I grabbed MAD. Happiest 15 minutes of my day. My laughing started on page 3. I thought I would make a deal. Publish my letter and I will sign up for a MAD subscription. If not I will just wait for the loser that leaves them on the table. Your call.

Eva Boyd • Detroit, MI

Resident Eva — What do you mean you started laughing on page 3?!! You do realize that Letters and Tomatoes starts on page 2, right? What the Fraggles?!? No deal! But look on the bright side...of the table, because that's where you'll find free issues of MAD, apparently. —Ed.

NO TIME LIKE THE PRESENTS

I am a MAD fan, and so are my siblings. This Christmas there were four big presents next to my tree, and they were all addressed to my five-month-old brother. My mom said that my siblings and I could open them, because it was obvious my baby brother couldn't. So we did, expecting baby toys or something. To our surprise, it was a bunch of MAD stuff! It was so awesome! Thank you, MAD!

Ava Gallagher • Kingston, NY

Ava Flav — What are you thanking us for? You're the ones who decided to steal gifts from a poor, defenseless baby! That's not what Christmas is all about! Then again, you probably did your brother a favor by taking all that MAD stuff away from him. Now he might actually stand a chance at being a successful, well-adjusted member of society! You're a good big sister — enjoy the swag! —Ed.

El, Mae, Luc, Ava and Lily Gallagher

SHOWING YOUR TRUE COVERS

We realize that you may have let your subscriptions to Zeit Magazin and Süddeutsche Zeitung Magazin (basically, the Time and Newsweek of Germany) lapse. Maybe because you don't speak German, or maybe just because they never featured Spy vs. Spy on their covers. Well, that changes now! (Well, not the "can't speak German" part...) Playing off their own rivalry, both magazines published issues about "Competition," featuring THREE awesome Spy vs. Spy covers done by Spy artist and writer Peter Kuper, with original Spy art throughout! We don't know if any rivalries got settled, but we do know this: three covers on two issues?!! Those are some crazy Germans!

INHERITANCE TAXED

I turned 60 this December. My only child is 16, and I thought I better turn her on to my sordid past as a MAD magazine aficionado before I kicked the proverbial bucket. I used to read MAD as a teenager and I turned out okay. I didn't turn out as a spy...or a cartoonist. I became a Girl Scout leader and a lawyer. But when I gave my daughter your December issue, she didn't get it. Where did I go wrong? Life is not worth living, without a MAD-infused warped sense of humor.

Pat Brown • Clovis, CA

Eastbound and Brown — We can tell you EXACTLY where you've gone wrong: your conviction that your daughter's life "isn't worth living" just because she has the good sense not to share your questionable taste in magazines! Trust us, she's on the right track! If you really want your daughter to be happy, stop pushing our mediocre publication on her and give her something she'll truly appreciate — for instance, a lifetime subscription to Dirt Wheels...or, better yet, a one-way ticket far, far away from Clovis, California! —Ed.

We're on Facebook! You should go there and "Like" us. Go on... it'll make you feel good about the Internet!

ARMAGEDDON OUTTA HERE

I have a very important question. Did you guys at MAD prepare for the end of the world? I know that some people spent thousands of dollars for underground hideouts to keep them safe. I didn't think that the world was going to end, and I was right. Since you call yourselves a gang of idiots, I was wondering if you were idiotic enough to use all the money you make from creating MAD on surviving the false end of the world. I noticed you mentioned the Mayan Calendar more than once in MAD #519, so you must have thought about it.

Aidan MacSweeney • Assonet, MA

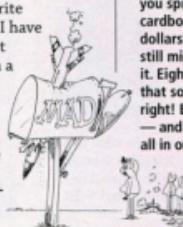

FrankenSweeney — Sure, we think about the end of the world. For example, today we thought, "Boy, it sure would be nice if the world came to an end right now, so we wouldn't have to read this letter from Aidan MacSweeney!" But them's the breaks (thanks for nothing, stupid jerk Mayans). To answer your question, no, we didn't prepare for the end of the world. MAD Senior Editor Charlie Kadau did end up buying a 40-year supply of tapioca, but that was unrelated to any doomsday prophesies. —Ed.

WOOD THAT WE COULD

I have been reading MAD since I was three years old. I have almost every magazine you guys have published! One of my favorite things is Spy vs. Spy. This is my first time writing to you. I have 10 shirts but they are now too small, but I am going to get more. I'm a really big fan — I even spray painted MAD on a big piece of wood! I can't wait to receive more magazines and MAD gear! My room is also all decked out in MAD.

Caleb Heideman • Sparta, MO

Heideman and Go Seek — Thank you for your fandom. As we've always said — no greater tribute can be paid to a magazine than to have its name spray-painted on a big piece of wood! Pulitzer-schmitzer! Best of luck with your continued fandom, and lifetime ban from Home Depot! —Ed.

THE COSTUMER IS ALWAYS RIGHT

Halloween means a lot of things: candy, spookiness and unlicensed homemade costumes that violate our trademarked characters and take money out of our pockets! Oh well — in the spirit of the season, we'll let it slide.

Fin and Fred Karkowski (hardly a fair fight!)

A MAN OF ACTION FIGURES

My name is Sam and I have been reading and subscribing to your magazine for over a year now. Just recently I bought one of the MAD "Just-us League of Stupid Heroes" Green Arrow figurines when I realized that its label read Aquaman, not Green Arrow (See picture). Do you think this thing could be worth some money?

Sam Caplan • Ambler, PA

Salary Caplan — "Do we think this thing could be worth some money?" Buddy boy, you're the lucky owner of the MAD-figurine-equivalent of the famed "Inverted Jenny" postage stamp (value: $977,500) or the 1909 "Slow" Joe Doyle error card ($329,000). We're pleased to tell you that your ultra-rare "Alfred Aqua Arrow" could fetch as much as — are you sitting there? — THREE DOLLARS on the open collectibles market. Actually...that's probably a bit high, what with the soup you spilled on the cardboard there. Two dollars? Hmm...that still might be pushing it. Eight cents? Yep, that sounds about right! Enjoy your riches — and don't spend 'em all in one place! —Ed.

A HAIRCUT ABOVE

I found out about your magazine when I started watching your TV show so I grew interested. My dad said that I could go into any store that has a magazine section and long story short, I saw my first MAD magazine cover. After that I made a deal with my dad that if I have a haircut, then he would buy me a MAD magazine. Enclosed is a picture of me in my Halloween costume as Alfred E. Neuman.

David Holderman • San Jose, CA

Too Hot to Handle, Too Cold to Holderman — You call it a "deal," we call it "cruel manipulation"! Judging from your picture, your father didn't stop at one issue and a single haircut! The missing tooth, the freckles, the ears...He's using your love of MAD to turn you into ALFRED HIMSELF! It's a common disorder known as Neuman-Son Dissociation Disorder (NSDD), and it's made you the spitting image of our numbskull mascot! Your dad sounds like a truly troubled individual — but as long as he keeps buying our rag for you, we'll look the other way! —Ed.

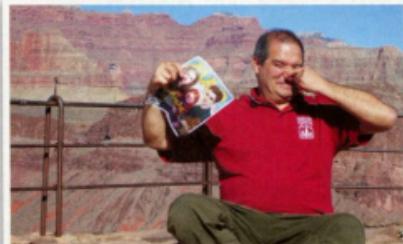

YES WE CANYON

You used to say your magazine was good for wrapping fish and lining birdcages. I found one more use. This photo is from Plateau Point in the Grand Canyon. When hiking and camping in the Grand Canyon, the weight of the items you carry is important. Any extra weight is a burden you only have to carry back up. Your magazine weighs a lot, but I found an item it could replace in my backpack — my toilet paper. I knew MAD magazine would be up for double-doodie. But the next time I need to remember: FIRST read the magazine, then...oh, well.

Dan DeLaTorre • Lakewood, CO

DeLaTorre: Three Feet High and Rising — Wow, those lucky tourists got to see two natural wonders: the Grand Canyon, AND a full-grown man popping a squat in front of the Grand Canyon! However, we can't help but notice that you're not holding a copy of the actual magazine. Maybe you'd have more room in your pack if you weren't lugging around a laser printer everywhere you went. —Ed.

READER ALERT

If your letter was printed in this issue, we have a bonanza of delightfulness coming to your very doorstep! You'll be getting Imagination Illustrated: The Jim Henson Journal by Karen Falk, courtesy of our pals at Chronicle Books; Spacehawk by Basil Wolverton, from our chums at Fantagraphics Books, a DVD of The High Fructose Adventures of Annoying Orange, Season 1 (on sale March 5), thanks to our amigos at Galam Vivendi Entertainment; Rock Toys: Cheap, Crazed Playthings by Brian Heiler, courtesy of our homies at Plaid Stallions Press (www.racktoysbook.com) and a Blu-ray 3D/Blu-ray 2D two-disc set of Top Gun (on sale February 19), courtesy of our buds at Paramount Home Media Distribution! GRAPHIC NOVEL REVIEW

DIARY OF A WALKING DEAD KID

By Jeff Kinney and Robert Kirkman, $11.95, Random Death Publishing

The Walking Dead/Diary of a Wimpy Kid? Two massively popular cartoon trifles, each with miles in the millions, but also two totally separate audiences. One series is a grisly exploration of existential horror, about an emotionally shattered hero just trying to survive another day with the terrible knowledge that his own family might turn on him at any moment. And the other one's about zombies.

Each title has reached the pinnacle of success for any comic book creator. They've been turned into a TV show and a movie franchise, so what fans don't have to waste their time reading the original source material ever again. Ugh, PAPER.

But the publishing houses aren't giving up that easy. And if they're hit a marketing ceiling, there's still one way to juice additional interest in their flagship titles: combine them! However, this particular crossover faces daunting creative challenges. On the one hand, you've got a grade school zitcom drawn on a blind monkey's Etch-A-Sketch that thinks seat assignments and sleepovers are akin to Shakespearean drama. On the other several hand, you've got a repetitive conveyer belt of macrourbanistic gore, with a more detached tolerance for head trauma than the NFL. How can such disparate genres be integrated into one satisfying work? Can two one-note projects harmonize into a symphony?

To be honest, I haven't noticed much of a difference since my brother Rodrick became a zombie. It's not like he got any dumber. And his conversation skills are pretty much the same.

GRRR GRUM LUNGH MRRRAA

Before I decapitated Mom and Dad, I promised there'd take care of Rodrick. So every couple of days, I place a food order with Rodrick's taillor. Gervices. In 30 minutes or less, I get free baked ziti, and Rodrick gets free delivery boy. How was I to know that Carl Grimes would ring the doorbell first?

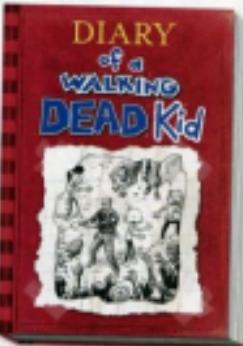

The answer is yes. These two series are actually a perfect fit. Who among us hasn't had an amputated sibling, and wanted to bleed through their carotid artery? Diary of a Walking Dead Kid manages to tap into the latent hoisteric rage that school and family are all about, and turn it into a charming, nightmares-wreaking funny ordeal of suffering that schizophaenics of all ages can identify with.

When the story begins, Greg Heffley wakes up to discover that he's been transported to the blood-soaked suburbs of post-nominal Atlanta. How is this possible, you ask? Oh, shut up. You never wondered before how Greg could have 90% of his body weight concentrated in his head, but HOW you're getting meticulous about realistic details and straight logic?

At first, Greg's happy with the switch because the weird kids have all been eaten, the smellified bullies can now be eaters, and it's okay to put an axe into your least favorite teacher's face. (Even more so if they're a zombie.) As Greg's pals get eaten one-by-one, his frenzied neighborhood newcomer Carl Grimes, Carl's the type of kid Greg's never seen before. Hardened. Resilient. Youngest NRA President ever. He's the most dangerous 13-year-old killing machine to appear in kids' literature since Pippi Longstocking.

If there's a problem with this savage zombie crossover, it's that all of your favorite Wimpy Kid characters are dead by the end of it, including Skinny Male with Buck Teeth, Skinny Male with Five Hair Lines, Stoozy Male with Buck Teeth, Skinny Male with Six Hair Lines and Prettiest Girl in School Who Looks Exactly Like Skinny Male with Five Hair Lines Except With a Wig. That leaves our hero Greg all alone, facing down a a pitiless world, holding his disputed internal thoughts to nobody. In other words, like every Diary of a Wimpy Kid book.

EASY WAYS TO LOSE WEIGHT

All lunchtime, don't walk to the local deli shop. Dog there.

Before you go to a party, stop at McDonald's for a Big Mac meal. That way you won't be tempted to eat a lot of healthy things, which are full of empty calories.

At amusement parks, eat the banks, cotton candy etc. Before you ride the roller coaster, whip or bungee jump.

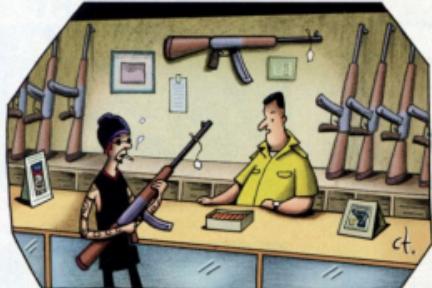

Very poor utensils during meals to minimize food intake. Eat your soup with a fork, your peas with a knife and only eat what you cut with a spoon.

You can avoid being tempted to have second helpings simply by making sure you take enough the first time around.

The Stupid Seven

WHY AMERICANS ARE STILL HESITANT TO EMBRACE SOCCER

- 1 The fact that the game can end in a tie. You know what else ended in a tie? Vietnam! And everyone's still peeved about that!
- 2 They fail to televise the most appealing feature: the fan riots.
- 3 Players are kicking everywhere and not one of them gets kicked in the 'nads. Inexcusable!
- 4 We just like to be 3,794,100 square miles of nationwide individualistic pains in the ass to the rest of the world. If that wasn't true, that measurement would be square kilometers!
- 5 Because Americans suck at it and if we suck at it, our egos won't let it be called a real sport.
- 6 The game ends in under two hours! How are we supposed to alienate and neglect our spouses and children if the game isn't at least three hours long??!
- 7 The jerseys have product sponsors right in the middle. It takes most people forever to realize the game isn't "The Red Bulls" vs. "The Bimbos."

THE 50 WORST THINGS ABOUT CARTOONS

WRITERS: DESMOND DEVLIN, JEFF KRUSE AND SCOTT MAIKO

ARTISTS: PETER BAGGE, ANTON EMDIN, ADAM KOFORD AND HERMANN MEJIA

Adventure Time: we can't decide whether it's a gateway drug to LSD or the other way around.

The blatant product placement for Acme in Roadrunner cartoons.

Why must it always be the Pink Panther... and Clifford the Big Red Dog... and Blue the dog, and Annoying Orange? Why can't we just judge each of them as individuals, rather than by the color of their skin, or fur, or rind?

In Ratatouille, Remy the rat never gives up. So how can he be French?

ELAPSED
00:354

Dr. Seuss movies: Taking a 400-word book and turning it into a full-length film by adding a crapload of time-killing, ancillary padding.

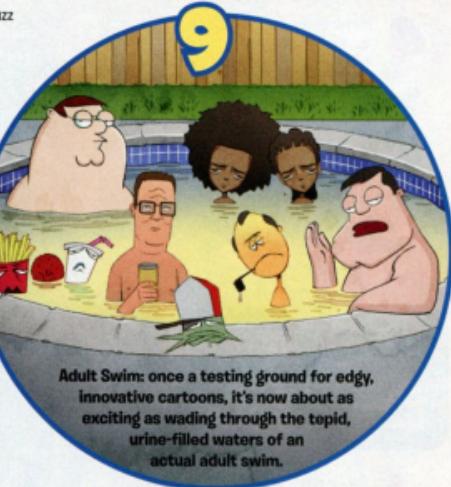

6 Dora the Explorer, which has trained a generation of viewers to think they can solve complicated problems by shouting at their televisions. Of course, so has cable news.

7 The obvious gay subplot of Buzz and Woody. Do we even need to elaborate here?

8 The Flintstones: at the end of every episode, that sick bastard Fred brings Dino along to eat some Bronto Burgers. Isn't that kind of like taking Mr. Krabs to Red Lobster?

Adult Swim: once a testing ground for edgy, innovative cartoons, it's now about as exciting as wading through the tepid, urine-filled waters of an actual adult swim.

11 Scooby-Doo. A six-foot Great Dane and four jobless sleuths driving back and forth across the country for 44 years...can you IMAGINE what the inside of the Mystery Machine must smell like?

10 Archer is only the second-best cartoon featuring an abusive, sociopathic sex addict and alcoholic mama's boy with an unfortunate history of killing hookers. You're not fooling anyone, Arthur!

Ah, the fondly-remembered, but largely worthless Schoolhouse Rock, which drilled Generation X with hippie folk songs they can still sing—and grammar, math and history lessons they never quite grasped.

13

It's pretty much impossible to enjoy a Gumbym cartoon when you're worried about that lump on his head. Has he had it checked out? Is it benign? It seems...bigger than it did in the last cartoon...

14

Bubble Guppies. Not only do we just not like them, it's fair to say we have utter contempt for them.

15

The fact that we can't even pour a glass of milk without getting depressed about missing children... wait, hold on, that's one of the 50 Worst Things about Cartoons.

16

The ridiculous depiction of the future on The Jetsons. Flying to work and robot maids we can buy, but an intact family with no step-kids? In the future? Yeah, right.

17

Scrooge McDuck: Thanks, Disney, for setting such a great example for kids who would go on to become business leaders.

1718

Trying to remember the names of all Seven Dwarfs, and always coming up one short (usually Sneezy).

19

The Flintstones, again, with its shameless Fundamentalist Christian propaganda. If we want to see humans and dinosaurs living together, we'd go to the Creation Museum in Kentucky.

The scary, hideous teeth on Aardman film characters, which only reinforce that negative stereotype about the English.

Eternally striving to improve Robot Chicken, Seth Green is driven by a singular creative vision: "Which superhero character haven't we hit in the balls yet?"

2226

Most of the species in Ice Age existed during the Pleistocene epoch, but the saber-toothed squirrel and the T-Rex had both been extinct since the Cretaceous-Tertiary extinction event, some 65 million years earlier! This kind of sloppiness makes it impossible to enjoy the part where the dancing sloth does the moonwalk.

We've had enough of this. What the hell does the "E" stand for?

24

Bambi's mother? Dead. Cinderella's mother? Dead. Snow White's mother? Belle's mother? Dumbo's mother? Nemo's mother? Lilo's mother? Ariel's mother? Pocahontas' mother? Dead, dead, dead, dead, dead, dead, dead, dead! Think Disney script writers have some issues?

25

The criticism of Pokémon for causing epileptic seizures in young viewers — when, in fairness, spasmodically writhing on the living room carpet is probably less damaging for kids than actually watching the show.

27

Turn on channels like Sprout or Nick Jr. at 3:00 or 4:00 A.M., and you'll see programs like Caillou, Wonder Pets, The Berenstain Bears and Wow Wow Wubbzy. What sleepless 3-year-olds are still up in the middle of the night watching this stuff, unless they live in a meth lab?

28

Family Guy's shameless plagiarism of The Simpsons, as well as its cruel mocking of Meg for being unattractive. Also, its tasteless depictions of the handicapped, with the greased-up deaf guy and kid with an upside-down face. Not to mention the creepy Herbert character and...you know what? Maybe we should just do a separate article called "The 50 Worst Things About Family Guy."

29

Four Shrek films populated by characters from fairy tales, yet not a single reference to the classic Serbian fable The Leprous Beggarwhore and the Giant with Dysentery?! Here's hoping it's in pre-production at Dreamworks.

30

The insipid Cars franchise: sure, the movies suck – but the fact that it puts money into

Larry the Cable Guy's filthy

overall pockets pushes it into the realm of pure evil.

32

Dexter's Laboratory: a withering indictment of society's modern, hands-off approach to parenting, with mother and father authority figures completely disconnected from and oblivious to the lives of their children.

33

The cable network Boomerang, with its slogan, "It's All Coming Back to You" – airing such retro masterpieces as The Flintstone Kids, The Smurfs, Pound Puppies, Captain Planet and the Planeteers, and Jabberjaw. Apparently "Vomit – It's All Coming Back Up" didn't test well in focus groups.

34

Those weird red concentric rings that open Looney Tunes. Hey, why is Cartoon Network airing the video of someone's colonoscopy? Oh, no, wait – it's a Bugs Bunny cartoon.

31

The here-and-gone 2011 reboot of Beavis & Butt-Head: the exact same teenage dumb asses from 15 years ago have somehow become too cerebral and sophisticated for the modern MTV demographic to grasp.

35

With Hanna and Barbera both dead, now it can be told: the previously suppressed correlation between the increased number of bear attacks in national parks in the early 1960s and the popularity of The Yogi Bear Show.

36 If Timmy Turner has two fairy godparents who can do anything with magic, why doesn't he get them to fix his hideous overbite?

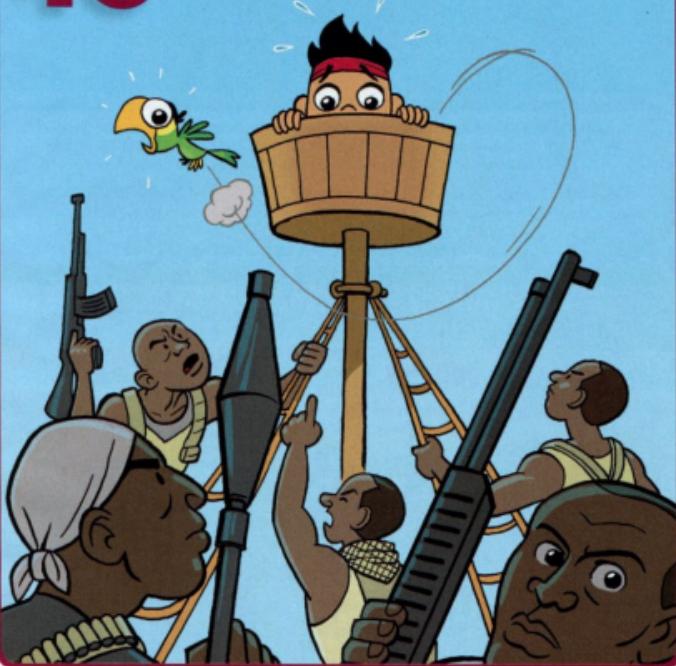

37 The suspension of disbelief required to accept that anime characters with severely dilated pupils walking around in full sunlight are not in constant screaming optical agony.

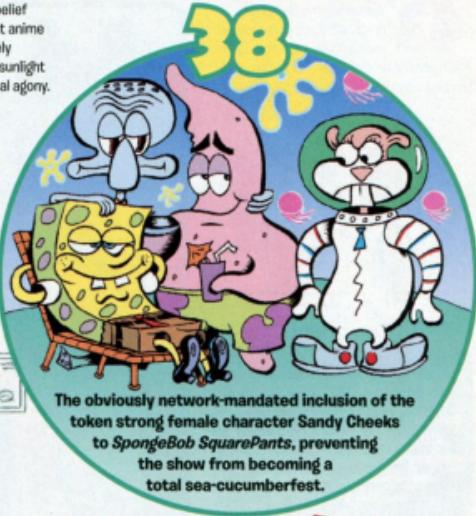

39 A heart growing three sizes in a 24-hour period isn't an indication that you're suddenly in the Christmas spirit – it's a warning sign of hypertrophic dilated cardiomyopathy. See a doctor immediately.

40 Jake and the Never Land Pirates, for making pirates look amusing and lovable. Guess the screenwriters haven't been to Somalia lately.

38 The obviously network-mandated inclusion of the token strong female character Sandy Cheeks to SpongeBob SquarePants, preventing the show from becoming a total sea-cucumberfest.

In Spirited Away, after the girl rescues one of the soot creatures, the giant-headed old lady steals pieces of her name. Then, the ghost boy reveals her parents have become amnesiac pigs. After that, a silent spirit gains a voice by eating a frog-man, and after the flood of gold, the white dragon, who's also the ghost boy, is attacked by a swarm of paper birds. But the next part, when one of the paper birds transforms into the giant-headed old lady's twin sister? Sorry, but that just doesn't make sense.

42 The unfortunate idea that an old man whose adventures revolve around his failing eyesight would be "funny." Imagine how much more hilarious Mr. Magoo would have been if he also suffered from dementia and incontinence.

The unrealistic depiction of quick, efficient, personalized medical help depicted on Doc McStuffins to an audience that will grow up knowing only ObamaCare.

45

Kung Fu Panda: the bizarre choice to have a panda fighting against foes like a snow leopard and a wolf.

Although that's probably more exciting than animating the panda's real enemies – habitat loss and low birth rates.

46

Annoying Orange: 30 seconds of it online is merely dumb and irritating. An entire 15-minute episode, however, should be dealt with as an international war crime.

48*44

With Ferb's disturbingly high pants, dead stare and eerie, prolonged silences, we get the feeling that Phineas' next "mission" is going to be finding suitable long-term care for his clearly unstable stepbrother.

47

Alvin and the Chipmunks: if a producer green-lit a project starring Jennifer Tilly, Rosie Perez and that chick from Chasing Amy, it would never see the light of day. Yet this animated ice pick-to-the-ears is still going strong after half a century.

49

Shouldn't someone run some sort of DNA test on Mickey and Minnie before things go any further?

50

Cartoon Network: we weren't going to list them but then we realized that's exactly why they should be included.

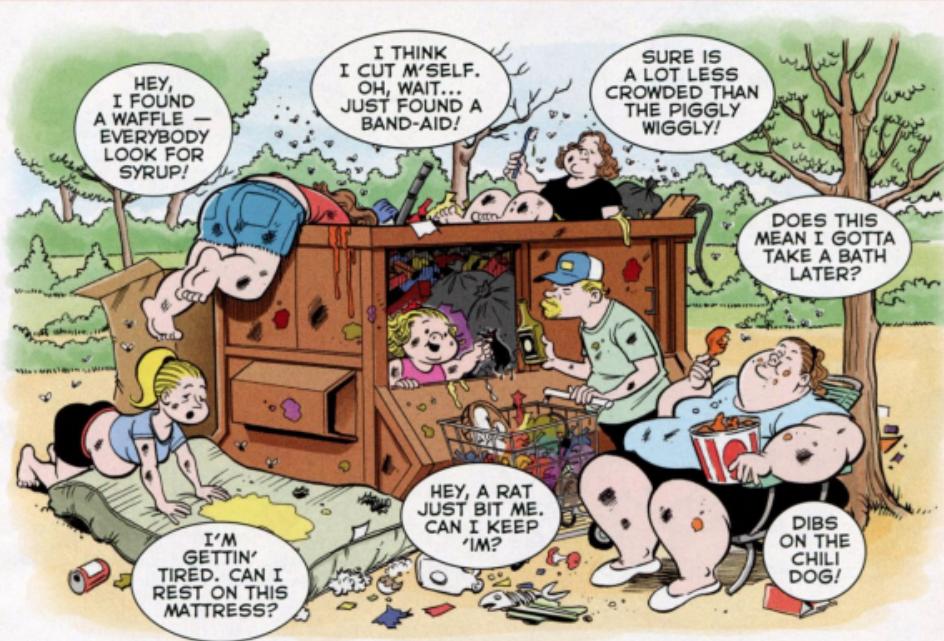

LOW-CLASS DISMISSED DEPT.

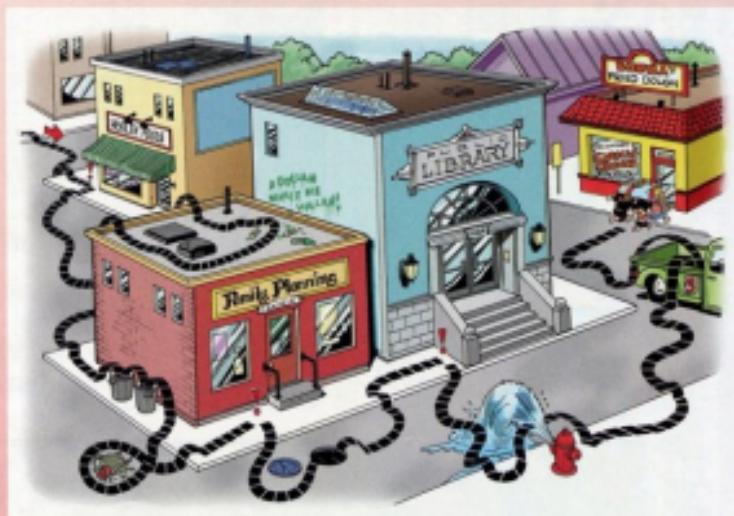

When you think of wholesome, all-American cartoon families, you think of The Family Circus. When you think of dysfunctional, all-American real-life families you think of the Thompson family featured in Here Comes Honey Boo Boo! Put them together and you've got...

PLANET TAD!!!!

ABOUT ME »NAME: TAD »AGE: FOUR SCORE AND -66 YEARS »HEIGHT (IN FOOTBALL FIELDS): .019

February 2, 2013

If I ran a sausage restaurant, I would have a special on pork sausage every February 2 and call it Ground Hogs Day.

February 5, 2013

I don't get why people call it "tuna fish". It's not like there's a tuna bird or a tuna cow to confuse it with.

February 7, 2013

So, I had kind of a weird run-in with Jeremy Cutler today. Jeremy's sort of a juvenile delinquent – like, he's the reason why they had to put a lock on the sign in the cafeteria announcing the day's specials, because the lunch ladies got tired of him stealing the letters "e" and "r" every time they served butternut squash.

He's also not very smart. Like, a while back, he was showing off that he'd stolen a pair of shoes from the bowling alley. Only Jeremy Cutler would think that it's cool to steal shoes that have the sweat of hundreds of people in them.

Anyway, today, I left during study hall to go to the bathroom, and I came across him writing on a locker with a marker. And he looked up and saw me and said, "Don't tell anyone you saw me." Unfortunately, I think he left a small clue that might lead people to figure out he did it. See if you can spot it.

February 8, 2013

So, today, Jeremy came up to me and said, "Hey! I got busted for writing on that locker yesterday! Why'd you tell on me?" And no matter how much I tried to tell him that it wasn't my fault, he wouldn't believe me. He just kept saying that he was going to "pummelize" me. And I said, "Do you mean you're going to 'pummel' me, or 'pulverize' me?" And he said, "Both."

Luckily, a teacher was watching, so Jeremy couldn't do anything then and there. But I'm going to have to be really careful to keep away from him for the foreseeable future.

February 10, 2013

I don't know why there's that extra "R" in "February". It's not like anyone ever pronounces it. Try it: Say "Feb-ROO-ary" out loud. You sound like a crazy person. You might as well go around pronouncing the day after Tuesday as "Wed-NESS-day", or pronouncing "strength" as "stren-GITH".

February 14, 2013

I've been dodging Jeremy all week long, and it isn't much fun. At one point this morning, I saw him coming down the hall, and had to duck into the Teachers' Lounge. I was sure I was going to get in trouble for that, but the only teacher who was in there was Mrs. Winter, the geometry teacher, and all she said was, "I didn't see you, and you didn't see me." I'm not sure what she even meant by that – it's not like she was doing anything bad. All she was doing was drinking coffee from a tiny square thermos.

February 15, 2013

So, I was eating lunch today when my friend Chuck said, "Jeremy Cutler's coming over to our table!" So I did the only thing I could do: I ducked under the table. It was pretty gross, crouching on the lunchroom floor – I wound up kneeling in a puddle of chili that someone had spilled. Making it even grosser: They only serve chili on Mondays, so it must've been a few days old. And just when I thought it couldn't get any worse, Frankie Hastings – who isn't especially small – got up and stepped on my hand. I can still read the imprint of his shoe on the back of my hand. He wears Converse.

February 18, 2013

Well, the good news today is, I successfully avoided Jeremy for another whole day. The bad news is, in order to hide from him after lunch, I ran into the gym, and wound up in the middle of basketball tryouts. So in order to stay in the gym, I wound up trying out for the basketball team. My tryout was cut short, though, because Coach Hayes said, "Think fast!", and then threw a basketball at my face, and I wound up getting a bloody nose. Coach Hayes just kept apologizing over and over, saying, "Honestly, you're the first player I've ever seen who just let the ball hit their face."

And that's when I reached a decision: Since I started hiding from Jeremy, I've been smeared with chili, had my hand stomped on, and been hit in the face. Basically, I'm getting beat up worse than if I'd just let Jeremy hit me. So tomorrow, I'm going to stop hiding from Jeremy. I'm going to face him. For all I know, maybe he'll even respect me for standing up to him. Wish me luck!

February 19, 2013

So, today was the day: The big showdown. It happened after lunch. I was standing in the hallway when I heard Jeremy shout, "Tad! You're dead meat!" And I shouted, "All meat is technically dead! The word for living meat is 'animals'!" And then I just stood my ground, waiting for him to come over, so we could settle this, once and for all.

That decision lasted until he was about five feet away from me, and I was reminded exactly how much bigger than me he is. That's when I took off running. And I ran through the school, and then out the doors, and then across the parking lot. And the whole time, Jeremy was chasing me, getting closer and closer, and I was getting more and more scared, and then I heard a loud thud. And I turned around, and saw that Jeremy had slipped and fallen. I guess bowling shoes don't get a whole lot of traction on icy pavement.

Anyway, Jeremy broke his wrist, and had to go to the hospital. And I guess the rumor around the school now is that I beat Jeremy in a fight. But I think I'm going to tell people what really happened.

Has an older person ever said a phrase that you've never heard before? Maybe they referred to a "Five and Dime" or a "long play record." Sure, it might be because they're suffering from dementia...but it might just be that the phrase isn't used anymore, and has left the English language (sort of). In fairness, it might be both. Still, before you have an elderly acquaintance complain, take a look at these...

MORNING, ERWIN, HOW ARE THINGS OVER AT YOUR
BUNKER? DID THE TIN FOIL
YOU ORDERED FOR HATS EVER COME IN?

SADLY,
NO. BUT I HAVE TODAY'S PAPER.

UGH, DON'T READ IT OUT LOUD.
I HAVE MY GUNS, I HAVE MY TIN
RATIONS, I DON'T NEED TO KNOW.

ACTUALLY... IT SEEMS THAT THE GOVERNMENT CONSPIRACY WE'VE ALWAYS SUSPECTED HAS BEEN REVEALED AS TRUE AT ALL LEVELS AND THE CROOKS HAVE BEEN TAKEN DOWN AND EVERYTHING RECONSTRUCTED.

HA HA HA HA HA HA
I KNEW IT! HA HA HA
HA HA I KNEW IT!

YOU'RE RIGHT. NOT MUCH

AH WELL.
SAVE A BULLET
FOR ME. WILL YA?

UNLESS... HM. WHAT IF THERE'S A CONSPIRACY AMONG THOSE WHO TOOK DOWN THE CONSPIRATORS? RIGHT? RIGHT? I MEAN, WHO KNOWS WHAT THEY'RE UP TO.

GOOD POINT! OR MAYBE THE NEWS ITSELF IS JUST A CONSPIRACY TO GET THOSE OF US WHO ARE "IN THE KNOW" TO COME OUT OF HIDING.

PHEW. THAT WAS A CLOSE ONE.
EXCUSE ME, I'M GONNA GO LOCK THE

En even as late as the 1970s, nothing had seemed to improve...

It was then that some savvy political consultant hit upon a vital new concept—if you can't change the messenger, re-interpret the message!

And thus was born that wildest of all political creatures...the "Spin Doctor"? They aren't real doctors, but they play them on TV! Their name comes from their purpose—to put a good "spin" on bad information. It wasn't long before others saw the advantages of Spin Doctors and immediately put them to work:

FEDERAL AGENCIES

The Nuclear Commission wishes to remind all pregnant women living in the vicinity of the reactor leak that thumbs are highly overrated!

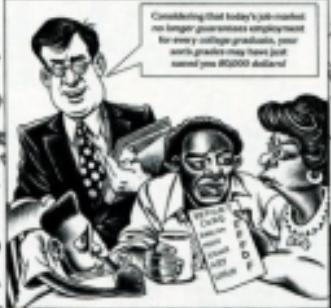

Of course, Spin Doctors don't come cheap and are currently only available to the very wealthy. With any luck though, the field will soon expand and their price will plummet to a range where anyone can afford one! When that happens, look forward to the day when there are...

MONOPOLY PIECES FOR MODERN AMERICA

THE UNABRIDGED NRA NEWS RELEASE

NRA STATEMENT

The National Rifle Association of America is made up of four million moms and dads, sons and daughters who haven't paid much attention as this organization has crushed any attempt to limit sales of assault rifles, high capacity magazine clips and "cop killer" bullets — and we were shocked, saddened and heartbroken by the news of the horrific and senseless murders in Newtown and especially the momentum anti-gun advocates seem to be gaining.

Out of respect for the families, and as a matter of common decency, and to give our PR team a bigger window to figure out how we're going to duck any responsibility whatsoever and blame this latest mass murder on untreated mental illness, video games and anything else we can think of, we have given time for mourning, prayer and a full investigation of the facts before commenting and trotting out our old propaganda chestnut, "guns don't kill people."

The NRA is prepared to offer meaningful contributions to help make sure this never happens again, and is prepared to work tirelessly to find loopholes in, and ultimately undo, any unlikely gun legislation that winds up getting passed.

The NRA is planning to hold a major news conference in the Washington, DC area on Friday, December 21, the start of the big holiday weekend, when most people are too busy to really pay attention and we can weasel our way out of this tight spot.

FOR MANY AMERICANS, WHAT IS THE MOST IMPORTANT
FORM THEY WILL EVER FILL OUT?

HERE WE GO WITH ANOTHER RIDICULOUS MAD FOLD-IN

As you get older, there are choices to make and paperwork to go with them. It's a real gamble — for all of these choices, you can bet there are consequences. Taking the time to be thorough and thoughtful pays off. Naturally, people are nervous to be in the deep end of the pool, so they study their options and fill in the blanks as best they can. To find out what form is dominating the thoughts of many, fold page in as shown.
